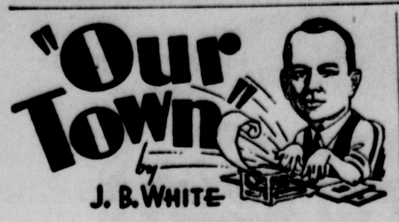
"Our Town" by J. B. WHITE



Along in the early Seventies the Englishman, Turnstall, from London, came out to the Capitan range and established a cattle business and also a mercantile business. Already in Lincoln was the Murphy and Dolan business with cattle and merchandise. Business jealousies soon led to trouble. Billy The Kid was born in Brooklynn, New York on November 23, 1859. His real name was William H. Bonney. He came with his mother to Lincoln and Turnstall was his friend. In 1877 Turnstall was shot and killed by the rival faction and the Lincoln county war was on. It raged from 1877 to 1881 and its violence attracted the attention of President Garfield who sent General Lew Wallace, author of Ben Hur, out to settle the feud. After Sheriff Wm. Brady was murdered by Billy The Kid, Pat Garrett was named sheriff. The Kid had been captured by Garrett, was tried and sentenced to die by the gallows, and was brought to the Lincoln county court house where he was under constant observation by two guards, Bell and Ollinger. On the day of the escape Ollinger had left the court house to go across the street to a hotel for lunch. While Bell and The Kid were playing a game of cards.The Kid succeeded in disarming Bell for whom he had a great fondness and tried to force him into an adjoining room but Bell,thinking it would be a serious reflection upon his record as a deputy broke away for the stairs. He succeeded in getting down only four of the dozen steps when The Kid shot him dead with his own gun. Two shots were fired and the bullet holes are now protected by a glass plate over the plaster wall at the bottom of the stairs. The Kid then went to the armory and got a shot gun loaded with buck shot and went across the court room to a window overlooking the street. Ollinger, hearing the shots ran out of the hotel. As he approached the court yard, the Kid called out: "Hello, Ollinger, look me in the face." As Ollinger looked up the Kid shot him down. He then went across the court room to a hallway and through a door to the balcony and fired another volley into the lifeless form of Ollinger. He called to a caretaker to bring him a file. He severed the leg chain and danced about on the balcony. In all he spent an hour in the court house before he forced the caretaker to bring him a horse. With a Winchester and two pistols he climbed down a pillar, got on the horse and rode away to the sanctuary of his beloved Capitans. Later he was killed by Pat Garrett at night in the home of a friend at Fort Sumner and is buried there along with his pals, O'Folliard and Bowdry. In the old days the east upper room of the court house was a Masonic Lodge. Entrance to it was gained by use of a ladder that led to a door, since sealed off. There are many historic exhibits in the old building. We soon drove away to Carrizozza and the great lava beds. Tomorrow, the lava flow.

JUDGE JEFF KEMP HEADS GOOD ROADS COMMITTEE

AUSTIN. (Special)—Judge Jeff T. Kemp, prominent Milam county good roads advocate, has been chosen Chairman of the Milam County Good Roads Amendment Campaign Committee, it was announced by Charles E. Simons, executive vice president of the Texas Good Roads Association.

Appearing on the ballot in the November 5th General Election as Amendment number three, the Good Roads Constitutional Amendment guarantees the availability of motor vehicle registration fees and gasoline taxes exclusively for road purposes, with the exception of one-fourth of the gas tax which will continue to be allocated to the Available Free School Fund.

"His deep interest in better and more improved highways and farm-to-market roads was the primary factor in his selection to head the Milam county campaign," Simons said.

Simons also pointed out that the Texas Safety Association, Texas Farm Bureau Federation, State Board of Education and thirty other state organizations have adopted resolutions strongly endorsing the amendment.

"With so many outstanding organizations backing the Amendment," Simons continued, "we feel that every citizen in Milam county should be fully informed of the provisions of the measure and the benefits they will derive from it. For this reason, we have selected Judge Kemp to head the Milam county committee and direct a vigorous educational campaign to point out the merits of this amendment."

Chief purpose of this proposal, it

FALL OF METEORITE IN COUNTY IS REPORTED

On Sunday, Sept. 15 a brilliant meteorite was seen by a number of people at the air show and elsewhere. Numerous noises resembling thunder or blasting were heard over a wide area.

A preliminary investigation was made by E. R. Cornelius, after which a visit was made by O. E. Monnig of Fort Worth. Mr. Monnig is a member of the American Society for Research on Meteorites. He is responsible for the recovering of a number of meteorites. He recently returned from a trip to West Texas where he recovered one that weighed 155 pounds.

From the results of the Milam county investigations, it was decided that several meteorites fell in the county on the above date. Mr. Monnig wishes to have as much information as possible in regard to these. With the information received from witnesses he will be able to determine the vicinity in which it fell. Witnesses will be needed who saw the streak of light or heard the noises the meteorite made. Some witnesses could have seen black specks moving through the sky or stones falling to the ground.

These meteorites are worthy of scientific study and preservation. Any person who saw or heard anything unusual on the above date are urgently requested to contact Mr. Cornelius, phone 28. Such information will be relayed to Mr. Monnig. If you heard any noise resembling thunder during the time of the air show, you more than likely heard the meteorite since no clouds capable of producing thunder were visible at that time.

Mr. Monnig left a meteorite with Mr. Cornelius for display purposes. It is suggested that farmers or any one who is out of doors often, should drop by and see it so as to be able to recognize a meteorite if one is found.—E. R. Cornelius.

YOEMEN BEAT NAVASOTA

HAWKINS LEADS SCORING WITH TWO TOUCHDOWNS

The Yoemen, held in tow for 10 minutes in the opening quarter of the game here Friday night by the Navasota Rattlers, flashed a bit of their potential scoring ability and defeated their rivals 33 to 7.

Navasota scored in the fading minutes of the game after the second string team held them for a full quarter. Coach Leo Jackson sent in his regulars but the ball was on the Yoemen 1 foot line and Haddock carried over. He also split the posts and it was 7 points. A series of passes took the ball down to the 5 and the Yoemen were penalized to the 1 foot line for delaying the game.

Lawrence Michalka late in the first quarter took the ball and raced 25 yards for the first touch down. It was a beautiful play as he swept the Rattlers left and behind some good blocking. Paul Burke who placed 3 out of 4 goals through the poles, converted and it was 7 to 0.

The second quarter was only a few minutes old when T. J. O'Neill who is the quarterback and called an excellent game, took the ball off the Michalka T and raced 30 yards. He was fast and impressive. Paul Burke then laced it through with a perfect boot and it was 14 to 0.

When the second half opened Navasota kicked off to Cameron. T. J. O'Neill in a perfectly executed bit of deception, passed the ball to Paul Burke and the fine full back was away. By far the most thrilling play of the game he ran 75 yards down the side line under a plow share of blocking, a fast trek and over standing up. Paul missed the goal but

An Open Letter To Mayor McCullin

September 27, 1946

Mr. A. W. McCullin, Mayor
City of Cameron
Dear Mr. McCullin:

At the so called bond rally last night, which was, as I understand, attended by about 50 people, you mentioned my name to a degree which may have been disparaging, in connection with a committee visit to Yoakum on your plan for a municipally owned light and power system.

I had not intended to refer to this visit because to do so might create a misunderstanding, since I was a member of the committee. However, since you made public mention of the conference there and in so doing imply that I have been inconsistent, I feel at liberty to tell the people of Cameron what transpired.

As you know, we spent considerable time with L. W. Sheckels, City Manager of Yoakum. In the course of our talk with him he said to you: "Under no circumstances should you attempt to build a light and power plant in competition with another power company. Since the franchise of the Texas Power & Light Company is soon to expire you will then be in position to install your own plant because you would then decline to renew the franchise."

At that time yu told the committee that the franchise of the Texas Power & Light Company would expire in two years and Mr. Sheckels so understood. Later we were to learn that the franchise will not expire for 29 years, or until 1975.

First Baptist Church to 'Ring In' New Church Year Sunday Morning

The First Baptist church will "ring in" a new church year Cunday morning, October 6. For the occasion the pastor announces it will be done in a literal way—by the ringing of bells. If you should hear a melody of hymns Sunday morning it will be the "golden voiced Cathedral chimes" helping this church to begin its new church year. On this day the sixty five faculty members of the Sunday School will assume their places for the new year and the other officers of the church will assume their places o fleadership.

In announcing this special occasion, Rev. Lester L. Morriss, pastor of the local church, stated that the chimes would be heard by amplification from the church towers and that they are electrically transcribed and under the supervision of George H. Shackley, Musical Director, Federal Council of Churches. Some of the numbers to be included are "Holy, Holy, Holy," "Doxology," "Safely Through Another Week," "Blest Be The Tie That Binds" and man yothers.

According to church officials the church year just closed has been a very successful one. The church has enjoyed seeing eighty-seven additions to the membership. During the year the church raised $16,506.65 with a great percentage of this going to mission causes around the world. The church recently gave $600.00 for World Relief in war torn countries.

Mr. Morriss announces that beginning Sunday night the evening services will begin at 7:30. His message at that time will me "The Devils Barbershop." He invited the public to hear this unusual message.

Telephone System Growth in Cameron Is Index to Population Increase; Cameron Has 1088 'Phones; 206 Added Since VJ Day; Company Employs 24

The telephone system in Cameron today is carrying the greatest load in it shistory, according to E. C. Crittenden, Jr., manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The number of telephones in service and the number of calls made daily over them stand at all-time record levels, surpassing even the new highs established during the war. And instead of decreasing at the end of the war, the demand for new telephones has continued at a pace never before equalled.

"It all adds up to the busiest time the telephone company has ever experienced," Crittenden said.

Cameron now has 1088 telephones, with 206 of these being added since V-J Day. This is an increase of 350 over the 738 telephones in operation here in 1940.

The volume of local calls per day has increased at the same time from 5178 in 1940 to 9635 now, a jump of 86 per cent. Long distance calls have increased even more and are now 130 per cent over 1940.

These new telpehones, plus the greatly increased number of calls, are taxing the present system to the limit but for the most part, at most times, the service is good, Crittenden said.

The hours of greatest congestion, when delays are most likely to occur, are between 8 a. m. and 10 a. m. and from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. Users can help and may get faster service, Crittenden said, by calling during the less busy hours, if possible.

"Our No. 1 job since V-J Day has been to provide telephone service to the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time," Crittenden said. "There were 59 persons waiting for service here at the close of the war and it seemed fair to us to share the equipment we had with as many people as possible. We have done this by installing only party-line service in homes, and by connecting telephones to existing switching equipment in the central office until now we are literally out of telephone numbers.

"There are still 24 persons waiting for service but through these temporary ,emergency measures, more people here are getting more service than ever before, despite the disturbed conditions and acute shortages in

Did You Vote For Competitive Utilities?

Last April when new faces came to the Council, did you expect that we would soon be voting for a system of competitive light and power facilities, or did you believe that a city program would include things we need?

You voted for a change, did you get it? Why all this energy expended over an impossible thing? Don't you think they should have directed their efforts as Council leaders to getting something for you—the things you need—rather than for "machinery salesmen" and investment bankers?

Has the Council at any time tried to work out a program for streets, sewer line extension, sanitation, municipal building, a home rule charter, restricted budget, or any of the dozens of things we need?

We were told recently that the franchise of the Texas Power & Light Company would expire in two years. We were told there might be some hope of buying a distribution system. Whose mistake was that? The TP&L franchise runs 29 years hence—or until 1975. Without previous notice or public discussion the Council ordered an election to vote $500,000 in bonds to enter the power business against TP&L. Whose mistake was that? If the bonds carry who is going to pay the bill for the next 29 years? In the meantime what will happen to our streets?

As we drove out of old Lincoln and headed for the lava beds at Carrizozo we passed through the western edge of the Capitan range of mountains and the northern extension of the Tularosa basin where some of the most picturesque cattle ranges are to be found. After leaving the mountains you drive to Capitan and to Carrizozo. To the west off Highway 280 is old Fort Stanton built by the Federal Government during the old indian wars and occupied at one time by the Confederate army during the civil war. The government now maintains a hospital for United States Marines at Fort Stanton. Nearby are the rich archaeological finds at old Pueblo where the pre-historic Indians lived. We were not permitted to search in the runis and so disappointed. Before you reach Carrizozo where the late Jim Nabours of Milam county was a cattle baron, you can see the great lava beds. The federal government and the state of New Mexico have built a highway running through the northern section of the lava and leading on to Socorro. Miles away you look at these beds and they lie black against the base of the red basin floor. These lava beds are 42 miles long and seven miles wide at one point. As the molten lava boiled up from the floor of the basin millions of years ago, it flowed south for over 40 miles and all but reached the gypsum beds at Alamagordo. Scientists have tried to explain the lava flow. It seems logical to assume that in ancient times the volcano was located in the center of this basin and when it burned out the crater was sealed over by cooling lava and until this day no one has been able to locate it. There are considerable depressions in the face of these beds and in some places from 30 to 40 feet deep. Where the basin floor is level the lava seems to be about 20 feet thick and through the centuries it has cracked until you can see the bottom of the basin. As you stand and look over this catyclysmic waste you can fashion in your mind what may have happened. You can even imagine the Aborigine standing on distant mountains peering into the sea of fire and in terror falling down to worship in some unexplained pagan effacement, nature in its most terrifying form. The lava is black and breaks readily and when separated one can see the effects of the terrific heat that reduced rock to molten form. On this vast area of some 150,000 acres one can see as in the White Sands below, vegetation peculiar to the area. At the edges of the lava the flow may be six inches deep and sometimes is 10 to 15 feet high, thus presenting a ragged pattern as it spread and cooled under the power of the diminishing volcano. Tomorrow more about the Tularoso basin.

Driving across the upper Tularoso basin it is easy to see why the old cattle men settled here or established their ranges. Out of the Capitan range flows a stream and as we crossed it its muddy flood was streaking west to fill up small reservoirs along the route. Rains had fallen only a few hours ahead of us. For almost a hundred miles the basin runs north and south and appears to be 30 to 40 miles wide in places. The soil is red, deep and very fertile. Going back to Ruidoso by way of the town of Tularosa one sees the western edge of the plain. Here lie millions of acres of land as level as the floor in your home producing nothing and looking more like a desert than a rich basin. I am convinced that here in the west is the future food pantry of the world. Irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities seem to say the future of this country is a paradise of farms and homes. As I drove along I remembered that the late Jim Nabours, uncle of Homer Nabours, county clerk, and Mrs. John House, once owned a great spread on this basin. He drove cattle out from Milam county in the Seventies. He was here during the Lincoln county war in which Billy The Kid was the central figure. Jim Nabour's ranch was near Carrizozo. In late years he quit ranching and moved to El Paso where he died and is buried. When Emerson Hough wrote his great book, "North of 36," on the trail herds from Texas to the markets on the Union Pacific in Kansas, he got a lot of his color here and wrote his book under the influence of these lands. Jim Nabours was chosen as one of the central characters in the book. Though fiction, the Lockhart ranch was chosen as the first round-up area for the first herd to go up. Old Jim Nabours was a salty character and from what I learn here lived as rugged as the book pictured him. At the time Hough wrote the book he did not know that Nabours was living and made suitable apologies for such liberties with his name. J. O. Nabours, a son lives in Tuscon, Arizona; Mrs. Daisy Hulbert, a daughter, lives in Silver City, New Mexico. Mrs. Will Isaacs, another daughter, lives in Las Cruces, New Mexico. Those were hardy men and brave spirits who set up homes in this rugged country but of such comes the great American tradition. Tomorrow some local color.

Yesterday (Saturday) we drove out to the ski country. Usually when we think of winter sports we think of Switzerland but right here in our own Southwestern United States is country just as picturesque. Ruidoso people are building a city in these pine clad mountains. They are completing ski paths about five miles north of the city. They supplement those already in use. This it to be a winter resort as well as summer. Many of the houses built for rent to tourists will be closed during the winter. Other houses and cabins are proofed against the cold. Up in the ski country spruce and pine cover the mountains and the growth is so dense the sun rarely if ever penetrates the dark aisles down which the ski blades will course this winter. This area is one of the most beautiful in New Mexico. At 3 p.m. Saturday the temperatures there were from 50 to 60 degrees. Between Ruidoso and the ski mountains is a beautiful golf course and around new residence sections are developing. Ruidoso has a building boom. There are no brick structures here, 90 per cent being wood from native pine cut in these mountains. A fishing license costs $3 and you have to pay an additional $1.50 to fish on the Indian Reservation. Early Saturday morning we struck out for the upper Ruidoso river near Old Baldy. It was bitter cold. Rain had fallen during the night and the stream was muddy but cleared up in a few hours. We went over to another fork of the river and found clear water but came back without trout. The reservation is patroled by Indians who are with the National Park Service. We met Charlie Bigmouth, one of the rangers. Charlie is a college graduate. Like many of the Apaches he is educated but cannot give up this paradise for living in Lincoln National Forest. Charlie showed us the likely places to fish pointing out the window of the house where he lives, a government structure. He gave our licenses a thorough inspection and we set off to the east fork. The water is very cold and rushes down at a rapid rate. There are no pools. You simply cast or use worms. No one seems to fish with live bait such as minnows the way we do down in the deep waters. It was with high spirits that I uncased a shining fly rod loaned to me by my god friend Charlie Nabours, and after rigging it out with what I thought was a good "leader" and carefully selecting a fly which I had soaked for some time to strengthen the gut, we selected a likely rapid and I began. After I had whipped out about a mile of the stream without so much as a strike my enthusiasm began to wane. I ended up with a pole and a worm but got no fish. Most of the old timers here use worms which can be dug up easily out of the rich black soil along the stream. Bis Horstmann sells Wormout, a concoction you mix with water and sprinkle on the ground and worms come out begging for a chance at the trout. On our way back we met a 71-year-old woman tourist who had caught a 16-inch trout with a ground, or wood cricket. It happens like that, you know. Tomorrow more about interesting places.

Lincoln National Forest covers 2800 square miles. Here in Ruidoso we are between two ranges of mountains. To the north the Capitan range and to the south the Sierra Blancas. El Paso is a little over 100 miles away. The Alamogordo chamber of commerce has issued a very attractive folder, well illustrated Alamogordo is New Mexico's headquarters for the lumber manufacturing industry. The big mills, one operated by the Community Public Service Company, are located at Alamogordo. The altitude is 4300 while the tract says the Ruidoso elevation is 7500 and at Cloudcroft, just 17 miles from La Luz, it is 9000 feet. Cloudcroft is called the "Roof Garden of America." You can loaf in the luxury of winter sunshine at 1 p. m. and be skiing on a snow-clad mountainside at 2:30 because you are only an hour's drive from the sun-drenched desert to mountains that tower two miles in the sky. Speaking of La Luz, a sleepy little village, it is famed as the locale of the closing chapters of "Anthony Adverse." Tularosa is called the City of Roses. On July 16, 1945 at 5:30 a. m. in a remote section of the bomb range of the United States Air Base at Alamagordo, man witnessed the achievement of one of the greatest scientific endeavors in history—the first test of the Atomic Bomb. We are reminded that this tremendous searing blast that lighted the desert that July morning sealed the fate of Japan and after Hiroshima and Nagasaki the whole concept of war had changed. You are not as yet allowed to visit the site where the bomb was exploded so we merely draw on our recollection of what happened. Right here in Alamogordo a second phase of the new concept of war is being developed by the Army with the cooperation of the Navy and scientists from all parts of the world. It is the experiment with the rocket and other Guided Missiles. This testing ground is on the far western edge of the Great White Sands and of course a safe distance from Alamogordo and all tourist routes. To me one of the most interesting visits during our stay was the hour I spent with the Indian agent and among the Apaches at the Mescalero Indian Reservation. This reservation 30 miles square in the heart of Lincoln National Forest is the home of the once fierce Apache led by the notorious Geronimo. Here now are a fine, industrious people who put to shame the whites in organizing and maintaining a nation. Although many of them are well educated they remain a picturesque people whose annual ceremonials attract wide attention. Before I leave I want to write a short article on my impressions of these fine people. (Tomorrow, just any old thing.)

IT IS REGRETTABLE

It was Benjamin Franklin who once said that things you do not need are costly at any price.

In 1945, October, a program of public improvements—things we need—was recommended to be paid out of the city's current revenues and at no increase whatever in the burden of taxes.

That program was indorsed by the Chamber of Commerce, The Rotary Club, The Lions Club, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Business and Professional Women's Club, Cameron Volunteer Firemen and the Knights of Columbus.

Based upon public sentiment a turnover was made in the city administration. What happened? Why has there been no known attempt to carry out a program of needed and vital improvements? Has any organization in Cameron indorsed a proposed bond issue of a Half Million Dollars to build a competing system of light and power utilities?

Where is the unity and decision we were hopeful about five months ago?

Are we to understand that there will be no street building no municipal building and home for the Firemen; no improvement in sanitation; no street lighting, nothing?

Tomorrow some figures they dare not quote.

FIGURES THEY DO NOT QUOTE

When a city votes bonds and builds a light and power plant it is not only necessary but the law demands light rates shall be high enough to pay off the debt, plus interest, salaries, operating costs, fuels, depreciation, etc.

What they don't tell you is that with two light and power systems, the rates charged by both must be the same. If, for example half the business goes to the city and half is retained by the other utility, those who remain with the present company, will have to pay the same increase as those who go to the city.

The city would have to charge higher rates to pay the debt. What does this add up to? It simply means that the total amount of money you pay for electricity might have to be doubled, depending on how high the city would have to make rates to pay for the plant. If the rates are doubled your bill would $184,000. If the rate is hiked only 50 per cent your bill would be $138,000.

Whatever the increase the power company would get half ot it. This is what happens when you have two systems.

The City Council proposes Five Hundred Thousand Dollars in bonded debt to build a competing system of light and power utilities. Here is the total of costs for the first year: Payment on Principal $25,000; Interest $15,208.34; Salaries for employes $20,400; Fuel $10,000; Insurance, Audit, Office supplies, Telephone and Telegraph, Etc, $1,275.00. Total $66,483.34. The total interest charge for the first five years is $58,457.51. Nothing is included in the above operating costs for depreciation which under experienced computation is 9 per cent on plant and distribution system. At present the total amount of electric business inside the city limits, less large industrial, is $71,500.00. If the city plant received half the business its annual gross would be $35,750.00. Against an operating cost of $66,483.34 for the first year, under the most favorable schedule, the city would lose $30,733.34. Remember that nothing here is charged for depreciation of for other items of expense that are necessary. If these items are taken into account the picture is much more dark. The first five year average for interest is $11,691.50. The 20 year average on interest is $7,984.37.

The plant would lose $153,655 in 5 years, if the city gets half the electric business. This could be overcome only by doubling or more of the rates. The loss figure here printed does not allow for reduced interest charge after first year but this is more than offset by the absence of depreciation and other costs.

Yesterday we showed what the first year and the five year loss would be based upon an estimate that the city would get half the electric business in Cameron.

Let's see what the 20 year picture looks like. All these figures are based on what the City Council has said it proposes to do, issue $500,000.00 in bonds to build a competing light and power system and to retire that debt in 20 years.

Assuming that economic factors would remain about the same for the next 20 years (they will not) the city, under liberal allowance would have an operating cost of $59,259.34 average per year. If it got half the business based on present volume the plant would lose $23,509.34 each year and at the end of 20 years would have lost $470,186.80. In the meantime the machinery would have to be replaced, and the distribution system would have to be replaced or rehabilitated to such an extent that the people might well owe close to a million dollars.

This is serious business. There is no point in an overwrought picture. Let us face the facts as they are, not as we would like to have them. If the city owned its utilities without competition the investment would be average, not fabulous. There is no hope for a competing enterprise.

To raise $35,750.00 electric income to overcome a $66,000.00 operating cost and to get into the profit bracket electric rates would have to be raised one and a half times or 150 per cent. This would entail an increase in your electric light bill of $43,620.00 per year for the city's part if they get half the electric business.

In 20 years that would be $872,400.00 increase over present rates for the city's share alone.

Under the law the Texas Power & Light Company cannot charge a lesser rate than the city. The power company, if it retained half the business, would pick up in additional earnings the same amount, or $872,400.00.

The staggering increase in electricity costs would be $1,744,800.00. We submit that no municipally owned plant is worth it, under a competing system.

If the city could enter the power business without competition, the story might be different, but that cannot happen for at least 29 years.

Bear in mind that these figures are based entirely on what the city council says it proposes to do, issue a half million dollars in bonds for a competing system of light and power utilities and retire the debt in 20 years.

BOYCE HOUSE "Gives You Texas"

Many years ago—in the Fall of 1919—your columnist, then the young editor of a small paper, received a letter from William Jennings Bryan, for whom I had had a lifelong admiration. The letter was written in pen and ink and was in reply to an inquiry as to whether the Great Commoner would seek the presidential nomination in 1920. Because it was a personal letter, it was not printed—but it might be of a little interest now, so many years afterward:

"My dear Mr. House: Your kind letter at hand. I assure you that I most sincerely appreciate your generous words. I have not thought it wise to discuss publicly the question which you ask and I will ask you to regard this letter as confidential. No condition that I can now forsee would justify me in being a candidate next year.

"I see no such demand as would make acceptance seem a duty. Besides, there is work to be done for the party and the country—work which I can do, which seems to me to be more important than running for any office. I could not do it if I were waiting for a nomination. Again thanking you for your confidence, I am, Very truly yours, W. J. Bryan."

The last echo of the August primaries has hardly died away, with the promise on all sides that there would be no increased taxes and already a proposal is advanced to raise the State gasoline tax 2 cents a gallon. The advocate of this increase of millions of dollars in taxes to be paid by the people of Texas is Senator G. C. Morris of Greenville.

The prospects of obtaining a milk market are better each day because there are several in the community about ready to start in order to establish the milk market. If you are interested in selling some milk in bulk at $5.75 per hundred, 4% test, call the writer and leave your name so that we may know how much there will be in the beginning. For each .1 of 1% butter fat above 4% the price goes up 7c per hundred. This milk will not be sold back on the local market, rather it will be pasteurized and bottled in Bryan and sold in Houston where there is a big shortage of milk.

Bert Childers and the Melon Patch

Bert Childers put an ad in the Clarion the other day. Here's what it said:

"Planted more melons than I can eat this year. Stop by and pick as many as you want. All free."

As you can guess, plenty of folks sent their kids over and plenty of the parents came too. Stripped Bert's melon patch in no time. And as they went away, Bert treated the kids to lemonade, and offered the grownups a glass of ice-cold sparkling beer.

Naturally it puzzled some folks . . . but Bert explains: "It gives me a kick to share things when I can afford to—whether it's the melons, or the lemonade, or beer. I guess I just like to indulge my whims."

From where I sit, if we had more "self-indulgent" people like Bert—who believe in share and share alike, live and let live, this tired world would be a whole lot better off!

Glamorous Kitchens To Spotlight Great Gas Exhibit at Fair

A premiere shwing of what is heralded as the glamorous New Freedom Gas Kitchen will spotlight the greatest display of gas appliances ever shown at the State Fair of Texas opening in Dallas October 5.

Marvelous appliances for home comfort and convenience will be shown in sparkling array in Lone Star Gas Company's stately building, officials of the company announced. These are the gas cook ranges, heaters, refrigerators and air-conditioners the industry has been planning during long years of war. Now they are here and the dreams conjured from the planners' drawingboard will appear in 14 great display rooms of the unique building. The structure is identified by a huge tower topped by a simulated blue gas flame done in neon lights.

Four kitchens, each distinct in design and color, will be displayed. One of the kitchens will show the gas appliances in actual operation and Lone Star experts will be available for consultation on menu planning and meal preparation, and kitchen planning and designing. All the kitchens will be complete in every detail, from top of the steel cabinets down to the linoleum on the floor.

The kitchens have been designed by Servel, Inc., manufacturers of the gas refrigerator. They are offered as complete kitchen installations or in separate work units.

A cabinet cowl provides automatic circulation of air for removal of greasy vapors, moisture and cooking odors. Other appointments include a food conditioning cabinet over the refrigerator for crisping cereals and crackers, condiment bays at convenient eye-level for frequently used items, and additional steel cabinets for storage of cups, dishes and other small containers.

The most magical of all the new gas wonders will be be the all-year gas air-conditioner that selects heating, cooling or independent air circulation by the flip of a switch. These air-conditioning units will be on display for inspection and in actual operation to bring comfortable temperature for visitors who will have easy access to lounging chairs, free ice water and clean rest rooms in the modernized building.

A large number of general gas appliances will also be on display and trained personnel will demonstrate and explain their operation. The equipment will include the 1947 Servel gas refrigerator featuring silent operation and a deep freeze unit for meats and other perishables; gas ranges with heat controls and other time and labor saving devices; automatic storage type water heaters, vented gas circulating heaters, floor furnaces, central heating plants that automatically distribute warm air throughout a house; unit heaters that provide heat for commercial establishments; gas equipment for industry and newest restaurant cooking equipment. Information will be available on the value of vented heating in eliminating wall sweating and providing healthful living conditions.

Bee Culture Talk is Made to Roratians

Bee culture, one of the most interesting and far reaching industries in America, was discussed Wednesday by F. E. Jackson, local honey producer.

The honey bee figures prominently in history. Aristotle the philosopher, Virgil the poet, and Pliny the naturalist, all wrote about bees long before the insect became important in agriculture. Even in Bible times, one reads about bees.

Mr. Jackson, now operating about 1500 colonies of bees, is a migratory honey producer. Bees are moved to all sections of the country to reap honey from the flowers occurring at different seasons.

The address was very interesting as Mr. Jackson told about bee culture, honey production and the amazing sense of business possessed by the bee as he organizes and operates his colony.

Milam county has a number of bee keepers. Money is made by selling queen bees, colonies and by honey. Some of the breeders sell to Canadian hony producers. In cold countries bees die each winter and have to be replaced.

Mr. and Mrs. Chambers and son, Ralph, of San Antonio, visited his sister, Mrs. Graham Gillis, this week.

the country which have delayed plans for expanding the telepohne system rapidly. Of those still without a telephone, only 6 were waiting at the start of the year and they will be served just as soon as it is physically posible," Crittenden said.

The company is doing all in its power to make the waiting period for everyone as short as possible, Crittenden declared. But, like everyone else i nthese times, the telephone company is standing in line for the vital materials needed to make a telephonesystem work — poles, wire, copper, lead ,switchboards, and cotton yarn, among other things. In each possible case, Crittenden said, the company is using substitutes for the scarce material but there is even a shortage of substitutes.

An expansion program calling for the expenditure of $60,000,000 this year in its five-state area in the Southwest and some $250,000,000 over the next five years already is well under way by the company.

In 1940 Southwestern Bell Telephone Company employed 15 people in Cameron and in 1946 the number is 24.

Mrs. Fannie Barron, with 20 years service, is in charge of the office; Mrs. Ruby Fogle, with 19 years service, is chief operator and in charge of operators; J. M. McLean, with 35 years service, is wire chief and in charge of installation and maintenance.

Editors in Early Days Were Forced to Fight For Right to Comment

In the early Colonial days, John Jeter Zenger ,the second editor in the colonies, was forced to fight for his right to comment in his "Weekly Journall" upon the acts of the governor. With Alexander Hamilton as his attorney, the case was won, and the freedom of the press established. English editors for more than a hundred years had atempted to gain that ground, but without success. Thus we see a new freedom established many years before the Constitution of the United States was written. This had its bearing in the wording of the First Amendment, which provided for freedom of speech, the press, religion and assembly.

'No time in history have the editors of the 11,000 weekly, semi-weekly and small daily newspapers been faced with so great a responsibility. Social upheavels, the result of the war, have brought to the surface many isms, few of which reflect the American way of life.

To combat these will require the united eforts of editors in the smaller communities of these United States. Here we find the true foundations of our democracy, where straight thinking and the application of horse-sense are in every day use. False doctrines and panaceas do not square with sound government nor the preservations of free enterprise.

The task of continuing the fight for the American way of life falls upon the so-called "country" editor, and with his community behind him he can, and will ,lead this nation to new and greater heights. Our forefathers left the plow stand in the field to fight for the freedoms we enjoy. No such price is asked of us—only that we stand four square in defense of those rights.—Fred W. Hill, President National Editorial Association.

heard thunderous roars from the stands.

Joe Hawkins, gangling right end, was to lead scoring for the night. He took a pass from Burke in the fading moments of the third quarter over the goal line. It was a difficult catch but Joe was not to be denied. Burke laced it through and it was 27 to 0.

Coach Jackson must bave been drinking in the antics of a fine team and in so doing concluded that it was enough for the night. He didn't underestimate his second stringers but wanted to give the conference squad a little rest. Paced by little Dee Dee Moseley and Turner and Matula, plus some mighty fine line play, the seconds messed up the Rattlers considerably and scored a touch down in the early minutes of the fourth. Again it was Joe Hawkins who took a pass from Dick Stedman and raced away for 12 yards and the score. Matula tried to run the ball over but it was no good. The score was 33 to 0.

The Rattlers working their southpaw, Haddock, got away with a good pass and was in midfield. A moment later another completion and the ball was on the five. Here Jackson sent in his main team but a penalty had placed the ball on the one and Haddock carried over. He kicked goal and that was the end. Burke, a Navasota end, was on the receiving end of the passes and did a good job.

The Cameron line turned in a good job from end to end. Bob Holloway went out with a kick on his ankle and was replaced by Shipp.

The field was fast despite the rain. The score might have been 60 to 0. Cameron made 7 first downs and Navasota 4.

OPEN LETTER

There was no mention at any time of a competing system but there was some talk about buying electricity from LCRA and buying the distrubtion system of TP&L.

If you care to examine the files of The Herald you will find that this newspaper has consistently opposed a dual or competing system of power and light utilities, or any other system of utilities. Therefore we are simply expressing a long established view of the matter.

Mr. Sheckles was very explicit in his advice that nothing should be attempted to set up a competing plant. I am in no position to say what Mr. Sheckels would have advised had he known the franchise has 29 years yet to run and I wish it known that I apologize for quoting Mr. Sheckels without his authority.

That was on Monday. On Tuesday night the Council here removed me from the Advisory Committee you had set up, though not on your recommendation. At the time no one spoke in my behalf but later I understand the matter was brought up again.

Let me suggest to you, Mr. McCullin, that you take a vacation also. It might help you to recover your sense of direction and good judgment. Maybe you could then concentrate on the program which the people believed that you would try to carry out.

Yours sincerely,
J. B. WHITE, Publisher.
